Mt. Samson

Maligne Lake

Maligne Chalet, commanding a full view of Maligne Lake, is situated on a plateau at the outlet. Before the Chalet and extending in a southeasterly direction for seventeen miles, with a breadth varying from two hundred yards to two miles and possessing some fifty miles of shore line, lies the largest glacial-fed lake in the Canadian Rockies.

Beginning with Mount Samson (the jagged peak, ten thousand feet high, which faces the Chalet on the left), the altitude of the peaks forming the Maligne group (Mount Charlton, Unwin, Warren, Mary Vaux and Maligne) increases until in Mount Brazeau, a height of 11,380 feet is reached.

The mountains rise precipitously from the lake and are heavily laden with snow and ice. At the southeast end of the lake, farthest from the Chalet, lies a considerable snowfield, and leading in a southerly direction towards the Brazeau River district, along the western base of Mount Brazeau, is a high broad snow pass, affording an easy way of access to this very interesting neighborhood. The mountains in the Maligne Lake district afford every opportunity for both ice and rock climbing and many comparatively easy climbs may be undertaken by the amateur.

The mountains, meadows and flowers of the alp-lands will prove of interest to botanist and naturalist alike. Sheep, goat, caribou, moose and deer frequent these pastures. The Opal Hills, facing the Chalet on the east, provide sheep and goat for the observation of the visitor, while the mountain sides, overlooking the lake and particularly those about the south-east, are used extensively by the mountain goats as a summer pasture.

Second Day: Rest at Maligne Lake and take scenic motor boat trip to upper end of Maligne Lake (36 miles return).

Third Day: Leave Maligne Lake Chalet at 9.00 a.m. (with guide and saddle horse), cross Maligne River via the saddle horse bridge, follow the Shovel Pass trail over the northeast shoulder of Bald Mountain to the Evelyn Creek ford, thence up the long easy slope to the summit of Little Shovel Pass at timber line. Coming into view from the summit of Little Shovel Pass are four miles of alpland to be traversed before making the last climb to the summit of Big Shovel Pass (8,000 ft.). On the banks of a small mountain stream between the passes a stop is made for lunch. Having crossed the alplands and through Big Shovel Pass, an easy descent across soft shale slopes brings the traveller into Shovel Pass Camp for the night.

Fourth Day: The route leads upward from Big Shovel Pass to the skyline of the Maligne Range, and, for more than two miles, the trail maintains an altitude of over eight thousand feet, which, due to the high altitude and peculiar location, in clear weather affords the rider a stupendous view of the mountains in all directions. Without doubt, it is the most comprehensive panorama that may be obtained from a saddle. From the skyline a short, though rapid, descent is made to the basin lying at the rear of Tekarra Peak where a stop is made for lunch before proceeding around the east and north base of the top of Signal Mountain, which overlooks Jasper Park Lodge and the Athabasca Valley at Jasper. The descent from Signal Mountain to the Lodge is made over the regular Signal Mountain trail. This is a four-day inclusive trip. Cost, including boat trip on Maligne Lake: minimum of two persons, $58.00 each. One person, $65.00. (Depending on snow conditions, this trip is open from July 10th to August 31st.)
